

My Mission in the World of Today

In a world filled with consumerism and capitalism we often forget about God and our relationship with Him because we are busy wanting more and it makes us feel guilty. To get rid of this guilt you must find your way to God by trusting and loving God. In order to find this, we must find our mission in this world. To me I think my mission in this world is to spread the Word of God, sharing my gift He has given me, and to learn more about God. My mission in this world will help me get closer to God, but it will take time of learning to achieve this. To spread the Word of God means to share His love to people.

The Word of God can come in many forms such as the Bible, friends and family, books, and the list goes on. It is my mission to spread the Word of God because people need God's love due to the lack of affection they get. For example, giving up my time to the less fortunate to help them get food is showing them God's love because you are showing them that someone cares about them. Helping others reminds us that we are called to be Christ's body and eyes by watching out for others and treating everyone as brothers and sisters of the Catholic Church. To conclude, my mission on spreading the Word of God means to show love and help people especially those who are in need.

In this world God has given me gifts and it is my mission to use them by sharing them to other people. Sharing your gifts to people is important because it can make a person being down to a person that is happy. For example, I use my skills to draw for my friends when they are down or unhappy and it always gets them to smile or make their day. Using my gifts is being Jesus's hands because I am serving others to make them happy. For example, in the New Testament Jesus fed a large crowd of people with two fishes and five loaves of bread. This shows that He brought joy to the less fortunate that have little to nothing. To conclude, sharing your gifts that God has given you brings happiness to others.

My mission is also to learn more about God because you develop and refine characteristics that you already have. For example, when you pray to God you grow spiritually closer and grow in God's love. This relationship with God's love is having happiness and thanking Him, but also asking for guidance and help during times of loneliness and suffering. This verse, "For surely I know the plans I have for you, says the Lord, plans for your welfare and not for harm, to give you a future with hope," reminds us that in our busy lives we need to trust God because He knows what is best for us and guides us for tomorrow. To conclude, when I learn about God, my relationship with Him grows so that I can hope for a better tomorrow.

Today my mission is to spread the Word of God by loving others, sharing the gifts that God has given me to bring happiness, and learning about God which makes my relationship with Him grow even more. My meaning of my mission will change overtime by the experiences and activities I do in my life time. As long as I have a mission I will always be striving to be like Christ and follow His footsteps. By following His footsteps, it will allow me to not fall into the ideals of capitalism and consumerism; and by trusting Him, He will guide me to the right path in life. This trust with God will create hope for the future that is good.

Kevin Schultz-Arellano Level 8 St. Mary's Cathedral

