

My Purpose

I believe that God put us all into this world to find our purpose. For one day we will meet him and tell him the mission that we have accomplished throughout our wonderful journey on earth. A lot of people are struggling to find their paths but through god he guides and navigates them to where they feel that they belong. In the past I have prayed to god about my purpose. I thought to myself that I could use my communication skills to pursue my mission.

As I am growing up, my eyes open to so much opportunities and chances to make me a better person, but especially a better server to the lord. As of right now I am proud to say that I found my purpose. I really would love to help out others who have special disabilities. This crossed my mind after I met this sweet amazing young girl who had Down syndrome. It made me sad because she isn't like the rest of us, and doesn't really fit into a group. But that didn't stop her from pursuing what she loved to do. This encounter made me see the world in a whole different perspective. Anybody can do anything if they put their mind and heart to it. Although this doesn't go for everyone with disabilities. There are a large number of people with special needs that lack self-confidence and struggle with fitting in with this society. I think my mission is to change that. I want to help out and motivate individuals. I want to use what God has taught me and guide them to where they need to be. I also would love to help out the less fortunate.

Growing up, I would say that I was incredibly blessed to have been raised with a roof above my head, meals on the table, properly educated and most importantly two loving parents. It hurts me to say that not everyone is privileged to have the things that I have been blessed with. I have witnessed a lot less fortunate people. A lot of them are living out in the streets with no food, no proper attire, especially in the extreme Winnipeg weather. With that said, i want to help out the less fortunate as my mission in life. I am very grateful for everything that I am gifted with, but it is extremely hard to enjoy and celebrate my gifts, when I know that there are people out there who I know are struggling to earn a few dollars. I want to make a difference and speak out for them. Even small charities or fundraisers can help out someone in need. Last but most importantly, my true purpose in my life is to be one of the many followers of god, my mission is to serve him and the church. I shall do this by attending mass regularly and just improve as my own person. This will not only please the Lord, but it will also make me feel happier knowing that I am pursuing my purpose of serving god.
